CLYMER IS SPEEDY AND CARRIES OUT CANTILLON'S IDEA

Latest Addition Gives Washington Star Outfielder.

By THOMAS S. RICE.

Manager Cantillon made good yesterday on his promise to add more speed and life to the Washington ball team. He bought Otis Clymer, the Pittsburg outfielders, and, unless the dope is all wrong, this should be another important step in the grand scheme of building up a ball team which will make this city a figure in the American League race.

Cantillon is quite enthusiastic about Clymer. He says he is one of the fastest and headlest runners in the National League, afraid of nothing, and always willing to take a chance on anything on or off the ball field. These are cheering words.

May Incur Suspensions.

The only trouble with Clymer is he has a hot head and a tendency to ac quire a grouch. The reason Pittsburg let him go was because he and Fred Clarke could not possibly remain to the same organization. They were constantly in a wrangle, and this tended to break up the club. Clarke is not the kind of man to handle a ball player of Clymer's mental construction, but Can Clymer's mental construction, but Cantillon thinks he will have no trouble in keeping peace in the club.

This keeping the peace may be a difficult matter. In the course of his stormy and eventful career Clymer has had knock down and drag out fights with Ganley, Blankenship, and Warner, of the Washington club, when they were members of teams in the National League. Judging from his acrid disposition, he is likely to revive these controversies. His fights all arose from collisions in baserunning and similar incidents of ball games, and all cost him long periods of suspensions. In the American League, with Johnson ever keeping an eye on Washington, Clymer's indiscrecions ir, this line will undoubtedly get him long periods of rest, if ne starts something. Let him beware.

Too Grouchy for Pittsburg.

It was probably this habit-of getting into trouble that caused Pitsburg to sell and the other National League clubs to waive. Still, Cantillon considers himself the old original specialist, twenty years experience in the art of taming wild spirits of the national his methods with his latest experiment. Clymer batted .286 in ninety games for Pittsburg in 1965, stole twenty-three bases, made four sacrifice hits, and was seventh in the list of outfielders with an average of .986. He is a right fielder, but Bob Ganley is said to be as good in left as in right, and may shift. Ganley is a great "sun dog," and, as all of the American League parks are famous for their sunfields in right, Ganley may stay in right and Clymer be developed in left.

FOURTHELETSIE, X. 1. Some leavest part in the No. 4 seat the Georgetown varsity shell has shown decided improvement, and the men are sworking with renewed vigor. The boat is going considerably better since the improvement in the bow, and that was Coach Murray Russell's idea in substituting Stuart. It has been found that the former captain, and the new manager of the crew, steadies the men in the bow and keeps Foy from rushing

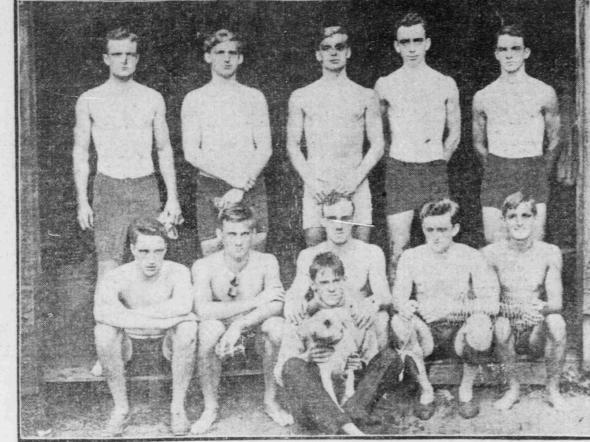

The three men with whom he fought, and the other members of the Washington team who have seen him play, are a unit in saying that Cantillon made a ten-strike in getting Clymer. They consider him one of the best all-around players in the National League and cannot understand why he was waived out, any more than they can understand why some club in that league did not claim Ganley. Although very fast on his feet, Clymer is a large man, which will be welcome news to the fans, for there is no doubt about big men inspiring more confidence in the hearts of a home crowd than little ones.

With Clymer, who will join Washington in Philadelphia on Monday, Ganley, and Jones. Washington has one of the fastest outfields in the business, and all good hitters. It looks an ideal combination and is bound to arouse enthusiasm, especially in view of the startling manner in which Charley Jones has recently buiged to the front as a batter. The more you look at them the better-they look. Hooray!

This outfield problem being so satisfactorily settled for the present the entire Washington team presents a good appearance. #### Cuban Could Not Master Language

They are laughing in Jacksonville at a mistake of Viola, the Cuban outfielder, who says that he can master the American game, but that he cannot master the English language. One afternoon, not long ago, when the score was close and his team was ahead, a ball was hit between the territory Viola covers and center field.

The Cuban started after it, and as he ran yelled: "I got it, I got it. Naturally the other outfielders kept off and were surprised to see the ball fall flat on the ground.

After the opposing side had been retired Viola walked to the players' bench and said: "I get mixed in my English. When I say I got it, I mean you take it,"
